The book contains a collection of papers dealing with a range of controversial accounting issues which exercised the minds of local authority officials during the period 1909-1934 and the "solutions" embodied in the Accounts (Boroughs and Metropolitan Boroughs) Regulations 1930. The contributors to the debate were mainly local government officials and the items reproduced cover a wide range of matters such as the content of the abstract accounts; the need for standardization and an illuminating comparison of the nature and contents of municipal accounts with those of limited companies. A number of issues which received close attention from the literature during the early part of the present century were related to the growth of municipal trading undertakings (water, gas, tramways and electricity).

The pricing of these services was a matter of considerable debate; questions included whether these services should be priced to generate a profit, break-even or receive a subsidy from the rates. The depreciation question and the related issues of loan periods and the need for a sinking fund receive some attention as do the growing concern of municipal debt.

Environmental Management Accounting (EMA) is increasingly recognised as a distinguished tool of environmental management. It helps to integrate a company's environmental and business interests, whereby enhancing corporate eco-efficiency in terms of reducing environmental costs or making one's product more competitive. This book gives a comprehensive coverage of the state of the art. It presents a number of EMA frameworks that companies can take as a basis for implementing their own specific EMA structures. Besides discussing environmental accounting issues within conventional management accounting, it gives a detailed picture of materials flow (cost) accounting as an alternative way of looking at the ecology-economy relationships at the corporate level. A fascinating case study shows how a large company (Siemens) applies materials flow accounting and what benefits it entails.

The Accounting Framework

Railway Age

Accounting Honours University Essay In 2000 the European Union decided that all EU listed companies would have to prepare their consolidated reports in accordance with the international accounting standards (IAS) of the International Accounting Standards Committee by 2005. In general, member states govern themselves but the EU has the power to influence their self-governance. In 2000, after the EU decision, the accounting regulators of each member state were free to decide when they wanted to adopt IAS for their consolidated reports, provided it was done by 2005. German, French and Dutch accounting regulators decided to adopt IAS for their nations' consolidated reports before the 2005 deadline. In fact, German and French accounting regulators did it in 1998 - before the EU decision of 2000. Dutch accounting regulators adopted IAS in 2001. Why did they make this decision? The purpose of the paper is to answer this question. There is a body of literature which details the adoption of IAS by accounting regulators within the EU and around the world. Examples include Nobes & Parker (2004), Uddin (2005) and Zeff (2000). Articles from this body of literature tend to detail the general adoption of IAS in terms of when it was done, by whom and for what. For example, they will state something like: “1998: New laws in Belgium, France, Germany and Italy allowed large companies to use IASs domestically” (Uddin, 2005, pp. 22). However, many of these articles do not often go into the specifics, in particular, into the ‘why’ element. This ‘why’ element gap is where the motivation for this paper comes from. The paper aims to fill in the ‘why’ element gap by examining specific possible reasons why the accounting regulators of Germany, France and the Netherlands decided to adopt IAS for their listed company consolidated reports. This will be achieved through a comprehensive study of the literature concerning European adoption of IAS. In terms of the structure of the paper, first, there is a section defining the jargons used, which are related to the paper’s research question. Secondly, a historical background of European accounting harmonisation is first provided. Thirdly, there is a brief overview of the accounting rules and regulations for listed companies in Germany, France and the Netherlands before their adoption of IAS. Fourthly, there is a discussion regarding the history of how (and therefore the reasons why) their accounting regulators made the decision to adopt IAS. Following that, there is an analysis of this material. Finally, a conclusion is provided.
